Dear Milton Hershey School Family:

It's rare that I go days without remembering all that Milton Hershey School has done for me. In fact, I'm still very close with most of my family from my Class of 2012; and we look back at some of our favorite moments all the time. Whether comedic, challenging, or with gratitude, we always find ourselves appreciating our time there and how it helped us transcend to where we are today.

Throughout my 12 years at MHS with my older brother Andrew, I was not able to confirm exactly what my profession would be. In high school, my concentration was TV, Film and Media Studies (now the Electronic Media and Journalism career pathway) with Mr. (Ronald) Rickens and Mr. (Doug) Legore, back when I wanted to make movies. Those two were a tremendous help in my media development and some of my favorite teachers.

It wasn't until senior year when I honed in on my love for DJing. I grew up off the radio, loved music, and knew almost every host personality and DJ's name. Until this day, the number one DJ who inspired me to become a DJ is DJ Diamond Kuts. A female DJ from Philly who created energy and a dance vibe like no other, and with me being a heavy dancer, her style just hit home for me. Therefore, halfway through senior year, my mind was set, and my spirit was sparked on pursuing a career in radio broadcasting and becoming a professional DJ. I honestly felt passionate about creating a positive feeling and experience for audiences that was contagious and inimitable.

It would be an understatement to say that this year's Opening of School Assembly was one of, if not the best, moments I have shared at MHS, even as an alum. I felt like I would always return to share my story or give back in some way, but never could I have guessed that it would be so soon, just seven years after graduating. It was a true honor to be able to showcase my skills and passions, and share my story with younger Milts on such a vast level. To be honest, it almost felt like a concert or festival. I was truly "in the moment," and I'll never forget it.

I look forward to returning for any endeavor I'm needed or that's requested of me. Once again, thank you Milton Hershey.

As Milton Hershey School celebrates 110 years and counting, among the long-standing traditions incorporated into MHS curriculum is social and emotional learning, which supports the foundation for graduates of the school to become productive citizens of their communities. The Compass Project plays an important role in educating the whole child, and artwork related to how students and staff incorporate the MHS Sacred Values into their lives is featured in an exhibit at the Clyde Stacks Visual Arts Center Gallery. The exhibit was open to alumni and visitors during Homecoming 2019, and alumni had the opportunity to visit with houseparents, students, and staff who contributed to the exhibit. The exhibit will run through March 27, 2020.

110 Years and Counting

By Susan Alger, MHS School History

Milton and Catherine Hershey shared a vision to help children in need and created a home and school 110 years ago. Thanks to their generosity, students have gone on to fulfill our founders' goal to lead happy, healthy, and fulfilling lives for over a century.

After the Hersheys signed the Deed of Trust creating the school on Nov. 15, 1909, they left for Europe a few days later. A postcard from Catherine to Milton's mother dated Nov. 16 featured a photograph of the Waldorf Astoria hotel on the front with this message: "Leaving here Tues for our boat ride. Hope you keep well. Love too Kitty." Because George and Prudence Copenhaver already were in place to run the school, the Hersheys knew things were in good hands.

Widespread news of Mr. Hershey's 1918 creation of the trust became known publicly in 1923. He gave his reasons for starting the school in the Homestead and his vision of what the school should be to the Literary Digest. "I was successful in business because I had opportunities. When the opportunities came, I took them. I want to make these boys who started poor have opportunities too. I always had the idea of having a farm for boys in the old homestead. I was born in a farmhouse a mile across country, and for 10 years or more I have thought of filling it up with orphan boys. That's the right place for a boy to start—on the farm."

Innovations of Milton S. Hershey.

Ilton Hershey was fascinated by new inventions and ideas, and actively sought to bring the latest innovations to his business, community, and school.

Technologies and Curiosities

Likely motivated by his wife's decline in health, Milton Hershey showed interest in medical advancements and inventions. One such invention purchased by Hershey was the "Electric Bath," a phototherapy treatment apparatus designed by the founder of Kellogg's cereal that bears a resemblance to the modern-day tanning booth.

A New Approach to Marketing

As early as February 1900, Milton Hershey began his effort to promote milk chocolate sales by bringing to Lancaster what is reputed to be the first electric automobile ever used for business purposes. He used the automobile, a Riker Electric, to both advertise his business and deliver his product. The unique nature of the vehicle prompted a local newspaper to describe it as "sure to attract much attention."

In 1915, Milton Hershey commissioned a series of 28mm films from a cutting-edge Hollywood film production company to document the making of chocolate and the scenery and opportunities of his utopian town. These films were circulated around the country to spread awareness of the Hershey brand.

Between 1909 and 1918, as part of a national marketing effort, Milton Hershey inserted actual photo postcards into his chocolate bars. Each bar was wrapped with one of a series of 20 fanciful collector "bar cards" that advertised the fresh, wholesome ingredients of chocolate, the sanitary nature of the chocolate-making process, and the beauty of the model town of Hershey.

Being an alum of MHS means that you have the responsibility to make the most impact you possibly can in other people's lives.

The announcement of the opening of the school appeared in many newspaper articles in the region. News of the new school planned by the "well-known chocolate king" was published in the Lebanon Courier Semi-Weekly. "M.S. Hershey, the chocolate manufacturer, of Hershey, believes in doing his works of charity while he is living." Although one news article wrongly reported there were two schools planned, one for girls and one for boys, they all described the plans for the school. The Hershey Press featured a photograph of the Homestead and the Harrisburg Telegraph described the school as a "noble charity of one of the nation's good men." Mr. Hershey's foresight was highlighted in one article as being "along the line of everything that is done at Hershey—provision is made for the future."

The first students, two sets of brothers, arrived at the Homestead on Sept. 3, 1910. The mother of Irvin and Nelson Wagner brought her sons and talked with Milton Hershey, who said he was glad they were there. Mrs. Wagner visited her sons every month and often talked with Mr. Hershey on the big front porch of the Homestead. He praised the boys, and Mrs. Wagner considered Mr. Hershey to be a good friend.

Every student who has gone through Milton Hershey School is part of the school's 110-year legacy and the living heritage of our founders, Milton and Catherine Hershey. Milton Hershey described this thought in 1943 to a reporter from the Elizabethtown Chronicle: "A writer some time ago said that the boys of the school would be my monument. They are my living monument, and I take my hat off to them."

Architectural Marvels

To create jobs for his community during the Great Depression, Milton Hershey embarked on an ambitious project called "The Great Building Campaign." Much of the notable architecture that defines Hershey today was constructed then, including the Hershey (now Hersheypark) Arena, the Community Building and Theatre, and The Hotel Hershey. The definitive style of these buildings was inspired by Milton Hershey's world travels.

The War Effort

The Hershey Chocolate Company developed the "Field Ration D Bar," commissioned by the United States military, for distribution to soldiers as a nutritional food source. Similarly, "Hershey's Tropical Chocolate" was developed to withstand the heat of certain war-zone climates without melting or spoiling.

Milk Chocolate for All

Always keen to experiment with new technology, Milton Hershey purchased a suite of chocolate-making machinery from Germany that he saw on display in Chicago at the 1893 Colombian Exposition.

Hershey's Chocolate was the first milk chocolate manufacturer to employ an innovative pricing model in the sale of its products, making the delicacy of milk chocolate financially accessible to all. Milk chocolate was once considered a luxury only available to wealthy consumers, but Hershey's affordability was key to its widespread success.

Philanthropic Pioneer

The greatest and most innovative legacy of Milton and Catherine Hershey is their school. The Deed of Trust established the Hershey Industrial School and laid the groundwork for its past, present, and future success. As we celebrate 110 years of helping children in need, we are fortunate that the foresight of our founders will enable the school to continue their mission in perpetuity for the next 110 years and beyond.

New Career Pathway Benefits Students' Career Goals

The Milton Hershey School Career and Technical Education program kicked off the school year with a new career pathway—Education and Human Services. Twelfth in a group of technical training tracks intended to provide hands-on learning that aligns with current job market demands, the pathway focuses on professions within the education and human services industries. MHS added the career pathway in response to job market research and student interest.

"This pathway is for anyone looking to pursue education or human services careers, including work as a teacher, guidance counselor, psychologist, case manager, social worker, or anything related to these fields," said Jenny Slatt, Education and Human Services teacher.

Kya Han, an MHS sophomore, wants to pursue a career in elementary education. She appreciates the variety of experiences she will receive in the Education and Human Services track.

"This [pathway] will give me the tools to fulfill my dream," Kya said. "Even if I don't want to go into teaching and I want to go into social work, I will be able to do that. This pathway supports anything in human services and will look good on my college resume."

Besides traditional desks and tables, the classroom is designed to make learning come to life. Complete with an early childhood instruction area and a counseling corner outfitted with couches, end tables, and soft lighting, the classroom will enable students the opportunity to gain hands-on experience in a space that simulates an authentic work environment.

MHS Community Inspired to BE GOLDEN at Opening of School Assembly

On Aug. 19, the Milton Hershey School community gathered to celebrate the start of a new school year. Students and staff were encouraged to "Be Golden" by living the Golden Rule, celebrating golden moments, and finding their golden opportunities, all in an effort to forge a golden future.

"Anyone can find the dirt in someone," said MHS President Peter Gurt '85. "Be the one that finds the gold."

The audience was asked to reflect on how they will choose to be golden this school year through inspirational videos and stories shared by students, staff, and alumni.

Woven through the assembly was the theme of kintsugi, the Japanese art of using gold to repair something that is broken and make it beautiful. A kintsugi artist, whose father-in-law graduated from MHS in 1958, shared her passion for the art and how it resonates with the MHS community.

"Our potential is almost always discovered and built during our toughest times," said President Gurt. "What we learn from the art of kintsugi is that sometimes falling apart is actually falling into place."

Zac Brown Band Member Visits MHS Students

On Aug. 29, Zac Brown Band percussionist Daniel de los Reyes visited the Milton Hershey School high school band. He shared life lessons and music with students before performing at Hersheypark Stadium that evening, where he showed his Spartan pride by wearing an MHS football shirt on stage.

De los Reyes spoke to the 45 high schoolers about his musical experience. He was candid with students about his early failures before finding success in the music industry. His perseverance in the face of failure resembles that of MHS founder Milton Hershey.

"A lot of the time, I failed," de los Reyes said. "But I didn't let it overtake me. I used it to be better. When that feeling overcomes you, it's okay. Just get back up."

MHS Eighth-Graders Learn from Freedom Writers

On Oct. 7, MHS eighth-graders learned about making positive choices during a presentation from original Freedom Writer speakers Cynthia Ray and Tony Becerra. Twenty-five years ago, the two speakers and their high school classmates gained national attention writing a best-selling book using diary entries about their own challenged lives. Their presentation, titled "Honesty, Good Decision-Making, and Literacy," tied the writers' personal experiences into the MHS Sacred Values and the idea of persevering through adversity.

"You are not a victim to your circumstances,"

Ray said during the presentation after she shared stories from her childhood and becoming a student of Erin Gruwell, founder of the Freedom Writers Foundation.

The Freedom Writers Foundation is a nonprofit organization based in Long Beach, California. Gruwell established the foundation after teaching 150 at-risk students, who then continued on to graduate from high school, co-author the New York Times bestseller, "The Freedom Writers Diary," and pursue advanced education. Gruwell and these former students now do outreach among various communities around the world.

"I've been in thousands and thousands of schools all around the country," Becerra shared prior to the presentation. "I have never seen a school as dedicated as Milton Hershey School is to the well-being of the kids and to education."

Spartans Win 77th Annual Cocoa Bean Game

On Sept. 6, the Milton Hershey School Spartans shut out the Hershey Trojans with a final score of 20-0 at the 77th annual Cocoa Bean game. The MHS community came together to support our team, marching band, cheerleaders, and coaches. We are proud to #BringHomeTheBean again!

MHS Welcomes New Students, Reaches Record Enrollment On Aug. 26, MHS welcomed 108 new students on Enrollment Day. Their arrival brings school enrollment to a record-setting 2,189 students—the largest number of students to attend MHS in its 110-year history.

New students were accompanied to their first day as MHS students by their parents/sponsors, family, and friends who enjoyed a day-long event created to celebrate the students' enrollment milestone.

Growing the student body is part of MHS President Pete Gurt's 2020 Vision strategic plan, which upholds the mission and vision of founders Milton and Catherine Hershey by cultivating strength of character and delivering a top-notch education; expanding our mission; and igniting staff engagement and exceptional performance. MHS is committed to expanding its enrollment to 2,300 students over the next few years to provide an excellent and nurturing home-life environment to more children from across the country.

BE GOLDEN

A Note from the MHS President

Dear Alumni Brothers and Sisters:

We are in the midst of another school year, our 110th to be exact, and there is excitement on campus. We welcomed 325 new students to campus in August, bringing our enrollment to a record-setting 2,189—the largest in our School's history.

At this year's Opening of School Assembly, Milton Hershey School staff, students, and alumni shared what it means to Be Golden. They incorporated their golden moments, showcased how they live by the Golden Rule, and reflected on their golden opportunities.

Gold has been a significant part of our Milton Hershey School story. Mr. and Mrs. Hershey insisted that the Golden Rule be hung in student homes. Our colors are Brown and Gold. Brown keeps us grounded—to never forget who we are and where we came from. Gold keeps us reaching, dreaming, and growing to build a better version of ourselves every day.

Woven into the assembly was the theme of kintsugi, the Japanese art of using gold to repair something that is broken and make it beautiful. A kintsugi artist, whose father-in-law is MHS alumnus Edward Clyde Miller '58, shared her passion for the art and how it resonates with the MHS community. What we learned from kintsugi is that sometimes falling apart means falling into place. It teaches us to not get stuck in our brokenness but to heal and become an even more beautiful and unique version of ourselves.

As Spartans, we are bonded through our shared experiences. For many of us, attending MHS was the golden opportunity in our lives that enabled us to forge a brighter future. We have Mr. and Mrs. Hershey to thank for that but we have one another to continue to inspire and remind each other to pay forward the opportunities we received.

I encourage you to join our students and staff as we aspire to Be Golden, live by the Golden Rule, celebrate golden moments, and find our golden opportunities—all in an effort to live our founders' vision and be the best versions of ourselves.

Sincerely,

Peter G. Gurt '85 MHS President

Milton Hershey School Student Takes Third Place in Diversity Essay Contest

Over the summer, Milton
Hershey School rising fifthgrader Iziah Lara was recognized for taking third place in the 2019 Dauphin County Cultural Diversity Essay Contest. Iziah's essay answered the question,
"How does diversity make our world a better place?" His essay spoke about how diversity teaches him to accept everyone.

"By winning this award, it makes me feel like I've inspired people," said Iziah. "We're all different, and we can help people who are different from us."

Approximately 400 children ages 6 to 18 entered the contest. Iziah won for the age 6 to 10 category. He received a certificate and prize for his accomplishment from Dauphin County Commissioner Mike Pries who came to Iziah's student home to give him his award.

Diversity

Imagine having all the same toys? It would be hard to have fun. Have you ever heard about diversity? Well, diversity is differences in people in almost everything they do. Diversity shapes the world and makes it better. It makes me happy because I can see my friends and hang with them. It teaches me to accept everyone.

Diversity allows me to see differences all around me, but to accept them. I hang with my Nigerian friend Malikai. I am Dominican, but I still hang out with them. That is diversity in a simple way. We all come from different places but are friends.

In conclusion, diversity is something I care about. If you really think about it, you would not be alive if it wasn't for diversity. Diversity to me is being able to get along with others that are different than me. This makes me a better human.

Building a Brighter Future for Myself

By Riley, an MHS junior chose to attend Milton Hershey School because I was determined to build a brighter future for myself. I wanted to attend a school where I could get a better education, and this was an amazing opportunity to take a step forward and see where I could go.

When I arrived freshman year, I planned to focus on my school work. I quickly discovered I still had plenty of free time after school, so I took full advantage of some new extracurricular opportunities. At the encouragement of friends, I decided to try playing the clarinet in the marching band. What made this choice interesting is that I had never played an instrument before! My teachers gave me lots of support in learning how to play notes, read music, and march with a group.

I had so much fun with outdoor marching band that I decided to join indoor marching band. This is a competitive discipline, and routines include more dance-like choreography. It was an exciting year for us because our indoor band made it all the way to states—and won first place! I definitely was able to make new friends and learn to work as a team through my participation in both marching bands.

From a classroom-learning perspective, MHS has enabled me to dream big for my future. The school's academic opportunities have sparked my interest in the field of law, public safety, and security. Through the MHS Career and Technical Education program, I am taking specialized classes and gaining hands-on experience with law and criminal justice. I even participated in the SkillsUSA Championships, a competitive event that showcases the best career and technical education students in the nation. I was proud to be part of a team focused on CSI that won states and advanced to nationals. It shows how far hard work and preparation can get you! I know I will find my own bright future as a criminologist thanks to the education I am getting here at MHS.

Learning through Experiences

By Elijah, an MHS sophomore first heard about Milton Hershey School from a TV commercial I saw during my sixth-grade year, and from that point on, I was hooked. The idea of a school that could help me—a person trapped, struggling in the chains of poverty—achieve something greater, really made me hopeful. As I learned more about MHS, I discovered a deeper fascination with the idea that I could one day be a proud student ... and now I am!

I am one of three brothers, and my mom fell in love with the opportunities this school could provide to our entire family. My siblings Jonah and Daylan soon saw the many benefits of MHS and followed in my footsteps to Hershey.

One of my favorite things to do on campus is work with animals. Currently, I work at the MHS Animal Center. When I am there, I work with goats, cows, and sheep. My favorite are the goats. Personally, I have learned so much about this job just from doing it. That is what I love about this school—instead of just sitting in a classroom all day, we go out and learn through experiences. Plus, I think working with animals teaches me responsibility and empathy.

When I graduate from Milton Hershey School, I want to study law. I know this because I take classes within a specific Career and Technical Education career pathway at MHS. Right now, I participate in the Law, Public Safety and Security pathway. I feel this track has put me head and shoulders above any other person my age.

This school has made me into something I am proud of—and no other school would have provided such incredible opportunities to get me there!

Coming Full Circle— How One MHS Alum Is Returning a Houseparent's Love

By Maria Boyer, MHS Office of Alumni Relations

When Shirley Zimmerman—known to Milton Hershey School alumni as "Mom Martin"—first stepped into student home Jackson in 1966, little did she know that one of "her boys" would end up caring for her in her later years. Shirley's first student graduated from MHS in 1975, and the last in 1982. Among those she "mothered" was Rodney Drake '80. These days, she can be found living with Rodney and his wife Roma in their Dillsburg home.

"They're amazing. Their impact can be felt for the rest of your life, as is the case with me and my Jackson brothers. Houseparents play a role like no one else in our lives. They provide the daily guidance and support needed to deal with the everyday issues of being away from home."

-Rodney Drake '80

Rodney talked about the value of houseparents: "They're amazing. Their impact can be felt for the rest of your life, as is the case with me and my Jackson brothers. Houseparents play a role like no one else in our lives. They provide the daily guidance and support needed to deal with the everyday issues of being away from home."

Talking specifically about Shirley, Rodney said that the key to her success as a housemother was the relationships she built with the boys' parents and sponsors. "It was important to her and Pop Martin to share the good and bad with our parents and sponsors so they could intervene where needed. I think the real reward for houseparents is some years later when the light goes on in our heads and we realize all the hard work they put in for us."

In May of this year, Shirley—now age 92—blacked out and fell. After some time in the hospital and a rehabilitation center, her doctors determined she could no longer live alone and no longer drive. When a short stay with a relative did not work out, she called Rodney and Roma asking for help. They welcomed her into their home on July 1.

Rodney and Roma's relationship with Shirley has always been strong. She played the organ at their wedding in 1991, is a grandmother to their children, and is respected by their family as a key influencer in Rodney's growth. While his biological mother is still active in Rodney's life, Shirley is someone he would call over the years for advice and guidance when he had a difficult decision to make, and as she aged and some chores became more difficult for her, Rodney and some of her other "boys" stepped up to lend a hand.

In addition to Rodney, Shirley remains in contact with his brother, Roger Drake '79, as well as Mike Black '79 and Jim Black '75. "The four of us used to get together at her house once or twice a year and do the outside chores she wasn't able to do," Rodney said. "While we did the chores, our wives helped Mom make dinner. We would eat, laugh a lot, and Mom would break out the same hymnals we had in [student home] Jackson, and she would play the piano and we would sing for a while.

"When my brother Roger and I get together, Mom is always with us," he continued. "This summer we had a pool party at Roger's, and Mike and Jim showed up to surprise her. Several honorary alumni also reach out to Mom often to check on her wellbeing, including Anne Reigle, Louise Swartzbaugh, and Connie Jennings."

Shirley herself is an honorary member of the MHS Alumni Association. When inducted in 2010, she explained that as a houseparent, it was important to her that the guardians of her more than 140 students understood that when they made the decision to enroll them into MHS, it was a transition from home to a place where the children truly had a second mother—a mother who would care for and nurture them.

Nowadays the caring and nurturing fall back on Rodney and Roma. "My wife is the primary caregiver," Rodney said. "She makes sure Mom looks good when going out with friends, and she is able to keep Mom in line better than I am. She also makes a point to give Mom a hug and a kiss every morning and every night." He does his part as well. "I run Mom to all her doctors' appointments and take her to church on Sundays."

Rodney admitted that taking care of Shirley has its moments: "Since her fall, her balance and dizziness have gotten worse." But reflecting, he concluded, "I feel that I am returning the love she gave to me and my Jackson brothers for all those years."

Milton Hershey and the Boy: 60 Years of Inspiration

The famous bronze statue of Milton Hershey with his arm around a student, "Milton Hershey and the Boy" was commissioned by the MHS Alumni Association and presented to the school on the 50th anniversary of its founding in 1959. Originally installed in Old Senior Hall in October 1960, the statue has been in its current location in the Founders Hall Rotunda since August 1970.

The statue was created by eminent New England sculptor Walker Hancock. Hancock is best known for his work at the 1939 World's Fair, the Pennsylvania Railroad World War II Memorial at 30th Street Station in Philadelphia, and the World War I Soldiers' Memorial in St. Louis, Missouri. Hancock served in the U.S. Army intelligence and requested to be assigned to the Monuments, Fine Arts, and Archives (MFAA) Section during World War II. As one of the Monuments Men, he helped save cultural treasures from the destructiveness of war and theft by the Nazis.

One recurring question over the last 60 years is the identity of the boy. Robert Beitzel '41 served on the alumni committee and became friends with Hancock. Beitzel wrote a booklet about the statue process and addressed this question:

Who is the boy in the statue? This is a question often asked and one I can answer. Upon visiting Walker in Gloucester, Massachusetts as he was making the 1/2-size model ... I made sure he had a photograph of me as a small boy (in shorts). This was the photo the school had taken of each of us when we were at the Departments in the early '30s. I wanted to be the boy in the statue. This was not an unusual request for me to make of the sculptor, who was now my friend. Walker very politely informed me that he had specifically requested the school—who was supplying him with every photograph of M.S. they could find—not to send him any photos of boys' faces. This statue of a boy would be a composite of every boy he had ever known, and would in no way be the face or body of any specific Milton Hershey School boy, but, hopefully, the face and figure of every boy who ever had been enrolled in the school."

Why the Spartans?

Pefore the Hershey Industrial School Junior-Senior High School opened in 1934, HIS students attended Hershey High School. The Hershey public school team was first referred to as Trojans in the Chocolatier yearbook in 1932.

When the new Junior-Senior High School opened, the first football team was coached under the leadership of Ralph Hoar, Alfred Gibble, and William Landis. In its first game, the team played to victory over previously undefeated Hummelstown, with a score of 6-0. Because there was no league for private schools that first year, the Spartans displayed their spirit and athleticism when playing teams of older students from Stevens Trade School in Lancaster and their own HIS alumni. They ended the season with a record of seven wins, one loss, and one tie, and scored a total of 132 points. For the second season in 1935, the team played in the Central Pennsylvania Trade School Conference and tied Williamson Trade for second place.

Many people ask when the Spartan became the official HIS mascot. Articles about various sports teams for the 1934-35 academic year in the student-written and produced School Industrialist refer to the teams as "The Brown and Gold" or "Pat's Passers." The term "Spartans" first appears in print in the October 1935 issue with coverage of the football games, and this explanation of the name: "The new name for the athletic teams is the 'Spartans.' It was selected by the popular vote of the student body."

In his 1962 doctoral dissertation, former Vice President and Headmaster Richard Rudisill questioned retired Junior-Senior High School Principal W. Allen Hammond about the Spartan name. Rudisill stated that, "The first football team was nicknamed 'The Spartans' because of its rugged and excellent power plays. 'So great was their fortitude,' said Hammond, 'backed by self-imposed, rigorous discipline, that all opponents felt their undaunted spirit and all 'home boys' were proud to be called Spartans."

Although the official definition of Spartan supports Hammond's description as "rigorously selfdisciplined or self-restrained" and "courageous in the face of pain, danger, or adversity," not everyone agreed with the name. Alumnus James Wolf '38 remembers that his ninth-grade social studies teacher objected to the Spartan name; Mr. Mumma felt that certain aspects of this ancient culture were not ones to be emulated. Wolf recollects Mr. Hammond coming to his classroom and having a chat with Mr. Mumma. Apparently, they worked through their differences and, except for one season missed in 1942 because of World War II, the Milton Hershey football tradition carries on with fortitude and undaunted spirit.

Love of Performing at MHS Led Alumna to a Career in the Arts

Jocelyn wrote "School Girls: Or The African Mean Girls Play," which had a successful run off-Broadway and is expected to run in 11 different regional theaters between now and 2020.

Jocelyn Bioh '01 has always had a love of performing and knew from her time at Milton Hershey School that she belonged in the arts.

"My fondest memories were performing. I looked forward to every Parent Weekend show, with the New Horizons choir and dance performance," she shared. "I felt so alive and free. I loved, loved, loved it. It never felt annoying or like work—it's how I know I was meant to be in the arts."

After arriving at MHS in 1995 as a seventh-grader, Jocelyn became heavily involved in the Visual and Performing Arts program. Throughout her time on campus, she participated in dance, Varsity Choir, Gospel Choir, New Horizons show choir, and theater. She also was a cheerleader, participating on the competition cheer squad for one year.

Among her many MHS memories, Jocelyn points to one project she has never forgotten.

"There was one year, when I was a junior, I went with MHS to an International Thespian Society competition where we did a super creative seven-minute showcase version of 'The Lion King.' It was unique in that the cast was comprised of students from different departments of the VPA program, and we made all of our costumes and performed the whole thing in blacklight," Jocelyn recalled. "We all knew it was cool, but the reaction we received when we performed was magical. The audiences applauded for 10 minutes straight, and we were all so overwhelmed with emotion. I will never forget that feeling. It was one I didn't have again until my opening night on Broadway."

"My fondest memories were performing. I looked forward to every Parent Weekend show. With the New Horizons choir and dance performance, I felt so alive and free. I loved, loved, loved it. It never felt annoying or like work—it's how I know I was meant to be in the arts." Photo by Joshua Bright

In December 2014, a group of MHS students traveled to New York City to attend a performance of the Olivier and Tony Award-winning production of "The Curious Incident of the Dog in the Night-Time," in which Jocelyn was a cast member. After the performance, Jocelyn made time to join the students, MHS staff, and several other alumni for dinner. At the time, she talked about making sacrifices and working a variety of jobs to help pay the bills, while also trying to establish a career in the arts. In fact, she had worked as a hostess at the restaurant where the group dined that evening. Her persistence certainly paid dividends.

As Joceyln worked to build her career in the arts, she was signed in 2007 as a spokesmodel for The CoverGirl Queen Collection campaign. Her ad was featured in several publications, including Ebony magazine and Essence magazine. She also was featured in a nationally running Queen Collection commercial.

Currently a working actor and writer in film, TV, and theater, Jocelyn is working as a writer and co-producer for the mini-series adaptation of the best-selling book "AMERICANAH" for HBO-MAX. It will be starring Lupita Nyong'o.

She also has written for the Netflix shows "Russian Doll" (where she also guest starred as an actor) and Spike Lee's "She's Gotta Have It." Her play "School Girls: Or, The African

had a successful run off-Broadway and is expected to run in 11 different regional theaters between now and 2020. Her newest play, "Nollywood Dreams," will be produced off-Broadway in 2020.

When sharing her recent successes,
Jocelyn credits the school with developing her performance skills at a young age and notes how MHS helped shape her path—and continues to influence her professional life.

"School Girls' was inspired from my time in boarding school at MHS, and that play changed my life," Jocelyn shared. "MHS is woven into my professional life in a lot of ways!"

Jocelyn has returned to MHS for class reunion celebrations during Homecoming and continues to have a strong bond with friends she met at MHS. "The campus continues to grow and change, but the energy of the students there is always the same, which I always think is cool," Jocelyn said.

After MHS, Jocelyn received a Bachelor of Arts degree in English and theater from The Ohio State University and a Master of Fine Arts degree in playwriting from Columbia University. She looks back at her time at MHS fondly, and truly believes it helped give her the confidence to succeed.

"I learned so much about me as a person and the kind of woman I wanted to be. MHS made me a lot more assertive and outspoken," she said. "I always want to be the best and do the best work I can. I know I learned that fighting energy from my years at MHS."

MHS Launches Regional Spartan Ambassador Program

The Milton Hershey School Alumni Relations Office hosted 27 alumni for an inaugural training program as it launched the Regional Spartan Ambassador Program on Saturday and Sunday, Aug. 17 and 18. Working with Enrollment Management and Family Relations, alumni were invited to participate based on their proximity to counties and communities where children eligible for admission to MHS are being underserved.

Participants learned how they can assist with the challenges of recruiting today's students by assisting the MHS admissions counselors in their home communities.

The program began with the opportunity for alumni to interact with high school students and houseparents from student homes Tuscarora and Wyandot. The two homes hosted a picnic and outdoor activities for the alumni as their Community Day service project.

The ambassadors then spent the entire day Sunday with members of the EMFR and Alumni Relations staff, learning about the children we serve today, how MHS operates, and the vast opportunities offered to our students. Much of the day was spent discussing and educating these alumni about the entire EMFR process, including student selection simulation exercises and other activities designed to equip the ambassadors with the information they need to accurately represent their home—MHS—today.

MHSAA President's Message

ow is it possibly November? This year passed so swiftly, and yet I remember thinking in January that Homecoming was so far in the future. Well, Homecoming was in late September, and it was worth every bit of energy we poured into it. I know I speak for the entire MHS Alumni Association Board and every other person involved, that we truly hope you had a wonderful alumni year and an especially fantastic Homecoming Weekend.

As the 2019 MHSAA president, it was my job to man the rudder, set expectations, and help those appointed various tasks to be successful. I can easily state that this board stepped up and I couldn't be prouder of each of them.

It is with humility that I recognize the wonderful contributions of so many who have graciously given of their time, energy, and effort throughout the year to help our board and the association be so successful.

The officers of the board this year were all superb, embracing their roles while challenging the traditional norms. Through their dedication, we moved into the 21st century with online bookkeeping, banking, and mobile point-of-sale capability, and our communications and marketing pitches are tech savvy and delivered through new web and social media pages. Institutionally and organizationally, we grew through Spartan Social Clubs, strengthened our financial position with prudent investment, leveraged dependable and responsive legal counsel, and secured consistent documentation of our historical papers. Alumni living within traveling distance never cease to answer the call for mentors, coaches, or enthusiastic supporters whether it is talking about careers, reading books, giving mock interviews, attending sporting events, or just hanging out and telling stories about back in the day.

With the wise advice and understanding guidance of MHS Alumni Relations personnel Lorraine Romberger and Catherine Skena, we navigated every issue and planned for a more cooperative future between MHS, the MHS Board of Managers, and MHSAA. The new Dick Purcell Spartan Classic set a new fundraising record that benefitted both MHSAA and the Dearden Foundation. We hope to build on this joint fundraiser with the Dearden Foundation.

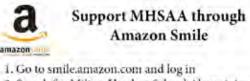

The MHSAA Board members and so many others who served our association this year demonstrated a true spirit of service and humility. As C.S. Lewis wrote, "True humility is not thinking less of yourself; it is thinking of yourself less." Everyone associated with the board this year thought first of their brothers and sisters and placed alumni needs above their own.

As this year rolls to an end, I will celebrate our accomplishments, savor all the memories, and pass the torch to a fine leader who I know will lead us through our next chapter, Michael Mulderig '71.

Thank you all for your trust and support. May God bless our school, home, and alumni association.
